Note

The following book list is far from complete, so we would welcome any additions or corrections you may have. In future, the list will be amended regularly.

Readers will notice that there is little uniformity in the amount of information provided about books on this list. Generally speaking, I have included what authors have previously sent to Steve Berry.

After many years of dedicated service, Steve has now handed over responsibility for maintaining the book list. In future, any additions or amendments should be e-mailed to Neil Hailey (neilr.hailey55@gmail.com).

Martin Ball

The nature of the islands round Britain in art. Published by the author. 2022. £25 ISBN 9781399915403. Available from the author (martin.m.ball@btinternet.com)

This is a personal account of Martin's exploration and observation of nature on many of the islands off the coast of Britain, ranging from North Rona to Sark. He has included those that he has visited since his boyhood, beginning in 1949 and ending 70 years later. The book is lavishly illustrated in landscape format with Martin's own artwork, after the style of Peter Hayman, and is mostly based on photographs taken at the time.

In response to your request for suggestions, might I mention my second edition of Faunula Grustensis: the Natural History of the Parish of Llanrwst by John Williams, originally published in 1830 and reissued in 2019? It was first published by the author and printed by John Jones in Llanrwst; the second edition was issued by Cambridge Scholars Publishing (ISBN 978-1-5375-3862-7).

The author takes a broad view of natural history, to include accounts of the agriculture of the area (which was a large parish stretching from Deganwy in the north to Gwydir Forest in the south). His account contains much of interest to the modern environmentalist; he laments the disappearance of beavers from the valley of the river Conwy at the eponymous Pont y Afanc, deplores the loss of stately mature oak forest from much of the upland areas, and mentions some of the rarest plants to be seen growing in local gardens such as the Snowdon Lily Lloydia serotina.

This was a pioneering work; as well as covering its fauna it was only the second published floristic list for a Welsh county or its equivalent (the area it covers includes much of the Snowdonia National Park and falls within the modern County Borough of Conwy).

It was edited by me with some additional material such as a gazetteer, a biography of the author and a bibliography.

David Jenkins

Of Partridges and Peacocks - and of things about which I knew nothing. 2003, 359pp, TLA Publications, PO Box 62, Aboyne, Aberdeenshire AB34 5SF. £21.

As well as throwing light on the many research projects that David was involved with throughout his life (particularly birds, including rare species of pheasant, and peafowl) the book provides a remarkably incisive commentary on the organisational changes of NC, NCC, and ITE during the 1970s, when he was director of research. He believed the split between research and conservation was a great mistake. It is well worth reading for that alone (David Goode).

Brief synopsis: Exmoor is one of only three large moorlands in southern England. Together with Dartmoor and Bodmin Moor, they have long been an inspiration for field naturalists of all descriptions. It seems appropriate, therefore, that this volume should bring the inspiration and the particularities of place together and allow the landscape of Exmoor to shine...

As someone actively involved with the environment of the southwest, Flemming Ulf-Hansen now provides us with a scholarly yet accessible volume on this fabulous area.

Notes from Tom Wall

'Moccas' is not easy to obtain but both Paul Harding and I have copies which I would be pleased to pass on at £10 each, £14 to include p&p with the money going to a nature conservation project.

The two Rostherne Mere books have sold badly, despite, in my view, being beautifully produced and full of important content. They are now remaindered, selling at £4 each, plus p&p

Downton Gorge is priced at £20, with £4 for p&p

See <https://tomwall.co.uk/> for further information

Moccas, Rostherne Mere, Downton Gorge and The Stiperstones are all NNRs.

My address is 18 Kempton, Lydbury North, Shropshire SY7 0JG. Cheques payable to me. Bank details available on request. By all means pass on my email address should anyone wish to have it.

Addendum – Publications by Philip Oswald:

Note: Philip spent considerable time compiling this exhaustive list in the months before his death. It's reproduced in full below as a small tribute to his extraordinary depth of learning and productivity, as well as his passion for exactitude! Note: Items written, jointly written or edited by P.H.O. that seemed to him the most significant are marked with an asterisk.

1963: - Philip Oswald. Britain's battle to save the countryside. Manchester Evening News, Saturday, 25 May 1963. [To make sense the reference to "Snowdonia, the Peak District, and the Lakes, all easily reached from Manchester," should be followed by "have been designated National Parks. In addition the Nature Conservancy, ...".]
